HEALTH SCIENCES

 Personal  Professional  Transformational

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

The Bachelor of Science in Health Sciences is a rigorous, lab-focused, hands-on curriculum designed to prepare students for roles in medicine, medical research, or public health. Often referred to as “pre-clinical professions,” this program prepares students to work in fields such as patient care facilities, medical laboratories, or government health agencies. Students may pursue graduate education to work in physical therapy, dentistry, healthcare, social work, or other physician roles.
